RACE, AND MAGGIE B. B. THE THIRD RACE. SARATOGA, July 19 .-- A fine old Massachuits gentleman remarked the other evening, with some ath as well as prejudice, "I suppose we've got to have schbred running horses, for without 'em we dous humbug, nevertheless, to expect peoible in any running race which ends with a which horse will win, and it is this intelinterest which is wanting to the gen essential to the fascinating exhibaration cral public in a running dash, althoughr it is essential to the fascinating exhilaration with which a true sporting man enjoys a race. In the Derby, every English turfite, young or old, professional or unprofessional, knows all about the horses, and picks his fayorite understay dialegly, but here, only the initiated are sufficiently acquainted with the horses to get intelligently enting as the property of the meeting, they would get up an enthusiasin among the public generally before the end of the week such as they never dreamed of. As it is, nobody except a small circle of turimen really knows anything about horses, and, what is worse, nobody cares, and before people have had time to puzzle out the colors of the lockeys the race is over, and that is the end of it. If exactly the same horses ran the second day the public would know still more, and by the sixth day the whole of Sara-toga would be in a fever of excitement, and the final result would be telegraphed to every city in the United States, and across the Atlantic too, despite the war." "Such an excitement," adds the gentleman duly, "might be very bad, morally considered, but it is what race managers and lovers of fast horses ought to aim at." Despite these disadvantaces, the races have been well attended, and to day's crowd seems to be the largest and gayest of the meeting. The weather, barring the shower-bath of the first day, has been very fine, but to-day the sun pours down such a merciless ficed of brilliancy that the very clouds, floating along the woody horizon line, seem to be seeling, in the cool, green tree-tops, for shelter from his burning caresses. The track is dry as a bone, and the smooth meadow that stretches across the race-ground legins to lose its June freshness, while the beds of furf in front of the grand stand, a crowd seems to be the rundon skeller and barrer shirt-bosom, wears a soft gray hat with an odd little bunch of feathers, and limps standily along with a heavy care. A NEGRO FESTIVAL.

THE "CAKE WALK" AT MOUNT VERNON. MOUNT VERNON, July 14.-Saratoga has its varied charms, its balls, soirées, and races; Newport its endearing attractions; West Point its fascinating cadets in the bright uniforms, which prove so irresistible to the fair butterflies of fashion; Lake George has its exquisite scenery and its learned Bostonian coterie; but all these are colipsed in one thing by quiet, unpretending Mount Vernon, for Mount Vernon has its "Cake Walk," a festi val most unique and most entertaining. This fête is, I believe, peculiar to the colored race, and although there may exist no written record of its history or of its originit has been faithfully handed down among the traditions of the past from generation to generation, by sable grandmethers, until in our own day it has suddenly sprung up again in our little village.

The colored people of Mount Vernon are endeavoring to raise funds for building a new church, and as it is always a quick-witted woman who is at the bottom of everything, some ancient relic of the joys departed suddenly recollected the festivities of her youthful days, and sed a "Cake Walk." The idea was seized with avidity by the younger members, and the result was the festival of last evening, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the erection of a Zion M. E. Church. It was held at Union Hall, and at an early hour the house was filled with a large audience, which comprised a motley gathering of white and black. The aristocrats of the vil-lage and the humble sons of Erin were fully as well represented in regard to number as were the sable portion of the community. Talk of "great expectations!" One should have been amid this same throng last evening to fully realize the true meaning of that term. Every face was beaming with expectancy, and every eye was turned eagerly to ward that part of the hall from which the procession was to start-for a procession there was. The pattering of impatient feet was heard upon the floor, as the time drew near for the ceremonies to commence, and once in a while a subdued whistle, or a halfsmothered "Shoo Fly," escaped from some mischievous urchin, who, however, was soon awed into quietude by a upon the platform. These sable brethren have a peculiarly ominous expression when they frown; it is the blackness of the thunder-cloud, with its dangerous lightning too. Upon long tables were placed a number of cakes with other refreshments. The largest of the cakes were those destined as prizes to the successful walkers. The dark beauty who should be adjudged the best promenader was to receive the largest cake; the one who made the next best display would carry off the second cake in size-and so on. At last the moment for which all had been waiting so long arrived—an elderly colored man arose and announced that the meeting was about to open. This was received with cheers. Then all the colored people, male and female, arose, and, forming into a precession, they marched slowly around the room, singing a hymn as they Church of Zion; there were feeble old men, who hobbled along upon their crutches and found it hard work to keep up with the rest; there were tall, flerce-looking negresses, with fun. Three times this odd proces sion walked around the hall, while the N. Y., 'Daisy Buris' and 'Myron Perry;' Frank E. Seven horses two carriages; J. Harker, four s., wagon and carriage; J. Passing the quarter pole, Witcheraft was leading two lengths, Major half a length before Regards, and Maggie still fourth. On the back-stretch Regards went in Iront, with Major second, and Witcheraft third, and as they dashed past the half-mile pole Regards was leading two lengths, Major as far before Witcheraft, and the other two as before. The HEATED TERM.

The temperate zone seems to have changed its nature, and the people of New-York now feel as if living beneath the Equator. The list of mortality grows larger every day, and the number of those who are taken off in the prime of life and without an instant's preparation, cannot but give food for reflection to the most thoughtless mind. Appended is a list of those who suffered or died from the heat yesterday:

WESTCHESTER COUNTY LABORERS. A difficulty occurred at Mamaroneck, N. Y. on Monday, which came near terminating very seriously. It appears that a contractor who is engaged in the cor struction of roads, and making other improvements there, after neglecting to settle with one of his laborers for work, gave him a note or due-bill for the amount, but did not put the necessary Internal Revenue stamp upon it, and subsequently, when the note was presented, refused payment, on the ground that there was no stamp upon it. A judgment was obtained against the contractor, and a writ of execution placed in the hands of tractor, and a writ of execution placed in the hands of Deputy-Sheriff Henry Summers, who, accompanied by a number of assistants, proceeded to make a levy upon a horse and cart, when a threatening demonstration was made upon the Deputy-Sheriff by a large number of Irish laborers, whereupon he drew his revolver. While his attention was diverted, one of the gang of rioters approached the Deputy-Sheriff behind, and, with the handle of a pick-ax, felled him to the ground, crippled the right arm, got the revolver away, and carried it off in triumph. At the same time the gang drove the Deputy-Sheriff saids before them. About 150 Italians, who were at work some distance off, were immediately brought up, and they in turn pursued the Irish laborers, and caused them to dee in ail directions. It is feared that the end has not yet been seen.

A WOMAN POISONED AT WURTSBORO

On Wednesday of last week the wife of Abraham Healy, an inn-keeper near Wurtsboro, Sullivan unty, a small place on the Delaware and Hudson Canal, died after a sickness of ten hours. Healy having arried under compulsion, and the two never living happily together, and the nature of her sufferings while sick led the father of the woman to suspect foul play. He communicated his suspicions to the Coroner, who held an inquest on Friday. An examination of the stomach was made by Dr. Edsall, of Wurtsboro, and two Monthello physicians, and unmistakable evidences of poison were discovered. The husband was arrested.
